Preface

From our experience, the demands for good teaching have increased dramatically in recent years. To aid instructors in this challenging environment, we have worked hard to make this Instructor's Manual a valuable teaching aid that should help save you time in preparing your class.

Rather than proceeding chapter by chapter, this Instructor's Manual is broken into four parts. Part One contains pedagogic suggestions on such topics as how to organize the course and how to use the ancillaries. Part Two offers chapter overviews and teaching tips that we have found useful in the classroom. Part Three contains the answers and solutions to the end-of-chapter problems that are not answered in the back of the textbook. Part Four provides the transparency masters for the chapter outlines.

We believe that this Instructor's Manual will be an extremely valuable tool in teaching the money and banking course. We would appreciate any suggestions or comments for improving the manual. Direct all correspondence to me at the address below:
